

Engaging your Board and Executive Leadership Team: Insights from a multi- national manufacturer

New View Safety partnered with a leading manufacturer in Asia Pacific to help drive a new strategic direction in the measurement and assurance of health and safety.

New View Safety

researched and wrote a white paper on the limitations of traditional lagging indicators and delivered a bespoke presentation to the Board and Executive Leadership Team.

Lost-time incident metrics are more appropriate as productivity measures, and are easily ‘gamed’, especially when linked to performance evaluations and rewards, and can create an environment of false assurance.

Critical risk management can help organisations to prioritise scarce resources and measure what truly matters – the presence or absence of controls and their effectiveness at reducing risk.

Innovate your safety measures by moving away from the traditional 'lead versus lag' distinction and towards an understanding of what your measures are driving, monitoring, and evaluating. Align them with due diligence elements.

Only when Boards and Senior Leaders can hear and accept ‘bad news’ can safety maturity move forwards. Optimise the information environment by establishing psychological safety and improving communication flow up and down the organisation.

---

Evolve safety through innovation.

Talk with us today to understand how New View Safety can be integrated and extend existing systems and processes in your organisation.

